Caucus may ask Mills to explain Spitz case actions

By Dana Jennings

The Faculty Caucus will consider a resolution calling for President Eugene Mills to explain to the Professional Standards Committee (PSC) why he disagreed with the Committee's decision on the Spitz grievance case, at a meeting today.

The PSC reported in February that Dean of Liberal Arts Allan Spitz interfered in a promotion and tenure case in the political science department.

Mills later exonerated Spitz, saying Spitz's actions were misunderstood and justified.

Today's resolution is a substitute for an amended resolution discussed at last Monday's Caucus meeting. That resolution urged Mills to "take appropriate steps to clarify the entire matter."

Robert Simpson, an associate professor of physics and a member of the Caucus said the new resolution should pass "by a large margin."

"I think it's a responsible action by Caucus," said Simpson. "Caucus is saying there should be further communication between each party, so there can be a meeting of the minds."

Mills declined comment on the Caucus resolutions.

Director of University Relations Peter Hollister said, "President Mills really doesn't have anything more to say right now."

Hollister said Mills feels he has stated and restated his position on the case enough times.

Simpson said he doesn't think his original resolution will be considered.

History Professor Hans Heilbronner said he does not object to the new resolution, but said it is redundant.

"The President has carried out his mandated duties," said Heilbronner. "This resolution is redundant. He has already explained the reasons for his decision."

Heilbronner also said today's special meeting is out of order.

Heilbronner said when last Monday's Caucus meeting adjourned, it was agreed the new resolution would come before Caucus at next Monday's meeting.

"Today's meeting is illegal,"

The Wall: beers and leers

By Dana Jennings

Fenway Park has the Green Monster. Asia's got the Great Wall of China. Main Street, Durham has The Wall.

Planted firmly in front of ATO fraternity in 1910, The Wall is 69 paces long, and stands about three feet high with almost 850 field stones in its facade.

On any warm spring or fall day The Wall is the gathering place for loungers, lovers and leers.

"The Wall is a social gathering for everyone," said Rob Simpson, a junior ATO brother. "You sit there and meet people."

"The Wall is a UNH institution," said Gloria Stanley, a junior from Plymouth. "You can see everything that goes on downtown and see people walk by you haven't seen in a long time."

But The Wall isn't all sun-worshipping camaraderie. There are people who fear The Wall and its so-called abuse line.

"We check out everyone who walks by," said Simpson. "Nobody survives The Wall without a comment — even dogs."

Not everyone enjoys the Wall's communal candor. Some women cross the street to Fairchild Hall before running The Wall's verbal gauntlet. And some of those who do pass The Wall, men and women alike, walk heads down and eyes to the pavement.

"I never walk by The Wall when I'm alone," said one woman who wished anonymity. "The guys are rude and obnoxious."

"Gaping" is a wall sport.

"The Wall's a great place to gape at girls," said Everett Eton, a junior ATO brother.

An ATO brother known as Pit agreed. "Babes get dressed up to walk by the Wall," said Pit, who was caped in a blanket. "It's like a fashion show. They know we're sitting here."

But it's not just women, who get scrutinized by men. Men are on display when they pass The Wall too.

"Guys walking past, get looked at by girls," said Sue Ward, a

Students bound for DC nuke rally

By Willard Tucker

Americans concerned about the safety of nuclear power, including more than 100 people from the seacoast area, will converge on the nation's capitol this Sunday to protest the use of nuclear energy.

The two-day affair, organized nationally by Mobilization for Survival and the May Sixth Coalition, will include a march to the steps of the Capitol building and a mock trial on nuclear energy.

"The American people are putting the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, the Department of Energy and the nuclear industry on trial," said Peter Moore, former president of the Memorial Union Student Organization.

Moore and Evan Cole, both environmental conservation majors at UNH, along with the Students Advocating Natural Energy organization and the New Hampshire Clamshell Alliance, have organized two busloads of protesters from Portsmouth and Durham.

"I think people are really starting to get pissed off about the lack of 'proper' procedure that should be taking place in nuclear plants but aren't," Cole said.

"One bus will leave Portsmouth on Saturday at 9 p.m. with 49 people," said Moore, "and another will leave Durham at 10 p.m. with 41 people." An unknown number of additional participants are driving down from this area.

Moore said other protesters are going to Washington from Plymouth State College, Waterville, Maine, and Brattleboro, Vermont. Most are students.

The buses from Portsmouth and Durham will arrive in Washington around 10 a.m. Sunday. After the march and the mock trial, Moore said, the 90 riders will board the buses for the 11-hour trip back to New Hampshire.

"It's a lot of effort on the part of the people who are going," Moore said.

Entertainment for the demonstration includes Jane Fonda, Dan Fogelberg, Jackson Browne, Dick Gregory and Jack Lemmon.

Moore said he had no idea how many people were going to attend the activities, but there may well be thousands.

"I knew Tuesday there were 90 buses from New York alone," he said. "It's going to be crazy."

News briefs

Dean to be named

The recommendation of a new dean for the College of Life Sciences and Agriculture will be made to the personnel committee of the board of trustees next week, according to Gordon Haaland vice-president for academic affairs.

"The personnel committee will then make a recommendation to the full board. The board appoints the dean," Haaland said.

The finalists for the post are Lincoln Peirce acting dean of the department, W.A. Cowan of the University of Connecticut, Howard Rollins of Ohio State University and Kurt Feltner of Montana State University.

The new dean will replace Harry Keener, who retired last year. Keener was dean for 17 years.

Course cancelled

Animals, Food and Man will not be taught next fall because there is no professor to teach the course, according to Samuel Smith professor of animal science.

"There simply isn't a teacher for next fall," Smith said. "I teach two sections of it in the spring. I am only part time."

Smith said the animal science department is considering hiring a part-time professor to teach the course in the fall.

Award established

An annual cash award for UNH mechanical engineering students was established by two Newington firms, it was announced yesterday. One or more juniors and seniors will receive awards based on academic achievement and potential professional leadership each spring.

C.E. Avery and the C.E.K.S.B. Pump Facility established the program in recognition of work done by Frederick Hochgraf, associate professor of materials science and others in the mechanical engineering department.

Students honored

The School of Health Studies honored seven students for scholarship, service and motivation yesterday.

Each student received a $500 scholarship at the school's tenth anniversary awards banquet.

Winners were Cheryl Arthur, Collen Engle, Theresa Gerardo, Diane Guzinski, Brenda Jackson, Cheryl Palmer and Nancy Watt.

Last issue

With this edition, The New Hampshire ends its 1978-79 publishing year. We will resume publication for the fall semester on September 7.

The New Hampshire's staff wishes its readers a safe and happy summer.

The weather

Today there will be morning showers and considerable cloudiness all day, according to the National Weather Service in Concord. Highs will be in the 60s.

Tomorrow there will be showers. Highs will be in the 50s.

Co-op: food for thought

By Scott Wilks

The Great Bay Food Cooperative benefits the palates and the minds of its 300 members.

Steve Burnside, co-op finance director, called the co-op an alternative to supermarket shopping.

"We offer whole nutrition food at lower prices than commercial stores. We are also a social organization for many of the members," Burnside said.

Some 120 households participate in the co-op.

The co-op is a non-profit student run organization comprised of UNH students and area residents.

Anyone can join the co-op by contacting the co-op office or by attending the Monday exchanges in the Granite State Room in the Memorial Union Building.

Co-op members are required to work three hours a month on one of the 18 food committees. Each committee is designated a particular job in the food distribution process.

Jayne Norris five-year co-op member said "The objective of the co-op is to offer nutritionally and politically sound food."

The food buying guidelines reflect these objectives according to Patty Groden general coordinator of the co-op. "We try to enhance the self-sufficiency of the area by buying our products from local producers rather than large, national producers," she said.

The co-op buys milk from Laurel Farms in Exeter and Yogurt from Johnston's Dairy in Somersworth. Bread is baked in Dover at Hearty's Bakery while eggs are supplied by local egg farms. Cider and apples are purchased from Leeward Orchards in Lee.

The co-op offers a variety of fish supplied by a Rochester fish market.

"Other products like grains, cheeses and flours are supplied through N.E.F.C.O. (New England Federation of Cooperatives.) said Burnside.

N.E.F.C.O. loans money to co-ops for equipment or establishing a storefront.

The interest paid on all N.E.F.C.O. loans is credited to the loanee as stock in the N.E.F.C.O.

Produce which comprises a major portion of most co-op members' diets, is presently bought from Chelsea Produce Distributors in Boston. "One member drives down to Boston on the morning of the exchange to get the produce," said Burnside.

The present co-op is the grandchild to the Newmarket co-op which was formed in the late 1960's. Area use caused separate Exeter and UNH co-ops to be formed in 1974.

Forty students comprised the original UNH co-op membership.

The weekly exchange was con-

Beckwith set to retire; pioneer in women's sports

By Beth Albert

"When I first came to UNH there were no women's varsity sports. They were considered evil," said Marion Beckwith, professor of physical education.

That was 43 years ago, when Beckwith was part of a four-member women's physical education staff.

Today there are 12 full-time professors and 12 instructors in the department.

The 65-year-old Beckwith spent 25 years as department chairwoman building the groundwork for a sound and happy department.

This year Beckwith retires.

Evelyn Browne, professor of physical education said the department is "happy mainly because of the leadership of Miss Beckwith. We go to conventions and see other school's unhappy. We are really fortunate."

Beckwith's eyes beam with pride behind her gray rimmed glasses when she talks about the department. "I'm so proud of this department. It's the happiest department on any campus anywhere."

The physical education programs have gone through massive changes since Beckwith was department chairwoman in 1942.

"There were strong intramural programs across the country. I even went back to Oberlin, Ohio to watch my college intramural field hockey championships."

"I felt that there were enough people more highly skilled to form a varsity program. We were taking care of the mob and ignoring the experts," Beckwith said. Her slight figure disguises a body healthy enough to lead the bicycle class around campus and teach an exercise class at 8 a.m.

Taking advice from the men's athletic personnel, Beckwith set up women's varsity teams that belonged to no leagues and had no scholarships.

"I have always feared too much stress on athletics," she said. Today Title IX compliance makes athletic scholarships for women necessary.

"When I first came to New Hampshire, there were no field hockey umpires. I would teach classes 'til 3 and get to the field hockey game by 4. I've gotten many a speeding ticket trying to get to Wolfeboro for a game by 4," she said.

Beckwith is of Boston stock. Her family went to Smith, Wellesley and Mount Holyoke.

She chose to be different and went to Oberlin.

"I was once told I was not as bright as my mother. That's when I decided to go to the school in the mid-west."

"I hope the present staff is brighter than I was. I am most proud of the development of a very fine staff which I hired from BECKWITH, page 7

T-hall cashier will stop cashing checks

The cashier's office at Thompson Hall will no longer cash personal or University checks effective July 1.

Thomas Harvey business administrator at Thompson Hall said increasing liability and the problem of getting money to Thompson Hall were reasons the check cashing service will stop.

"The recommendation was made several years ago by our auditors. We have had a lot of bouncing checks lately and lots of problems collecting money."

"The problem of getting money from local banks was worsening. Sometimes we'd have to get money from the Federal Reserve in Boston," Harvey said.

The policy change was decided by the Board of Trustees and the vice chancellor treasurer at recent meetings according to Harvey.

Students will be able to cash checks of no more than $25 at the Durham Trust Company with a validated identification card. Dover Federal will only cash checks for those who have accounts with the bank.

The cashier's office cashed 3000 to 7000 checks per week, according to Harvey.

Solar Coalition puts on Sun Day

By David Foster

The morning sun peeked over Stoke Hall yesterday at 5:30 to shine on the 20 students standing in a large circle on Thompson Hall's front lawn.

They were gathered to celebrate the dawning of SunDay, the second annual tribute to solar energy sponsored by the UNH Solar Energy Coalition.

The early-risers bowed and stretched silently as John Michaud, a dancer of the eastern art Mau-Tu-Yen, led them through a tribute to the four corners of the earth. After the dance, the students huddled together in the chill morning air for a breakfast of muffins and orange slices.

The sunrise service began a day of events that included displays, demonstrations and tours of local solar powered systems, as well as an afternoon concert in East-West Park and speeches.

N.H. Executive Councilor Dudley Dudley said the issues of solar and nuclear energies are linked.

"May 3rd of 1978 (last year's SunDay) gave solar energy the biggest boost it will ever get," she told an audience of 50 in the MUB's Merrimack Room. "But you can't divorce solar power from nuclear power."

"One of the best incentives to using the sun," she continued, "is the fact that we must find an alternative to nuclear power before we are done in by it."

Dudley said she had hand-delivered a letter expressing her concern about nuclear energy to President Carter during his recent visit to New Hampshire and his response was not overly encouraging. She said it was up to the people to make sure Carter makes responsible decisions in nuclear power.

"Assuming an early phaseout of nuclear power we then must put our research and energies into the sun, a renewable and abundant supply of energy available all over the world," Dudley said.

Research is already going on, according to other speakers. Bruce Kaufman spoke of his experiences building solar greenhouses throughout New Hampshire. The possibilities of solar home heating were discussed by James Cardwell of Solar Homes, Inc. and Norman Laberge talked of his efforts to harness tidal

Budget prospects look good

By Beth Albert

Despite student fears of an out-of-state tuition increase, the university budget request is in the best shape since 1970, according to Bruce Poulton, chancellor of the university system.

"The House is more unified than before and the governor is much more stand-offish (than former Gov. Meldrim Thomson). He is not attempting to influence legislation," Poulton said.

"We went out a letter to alert out-of-state students of a possible tuition increase," Poulton said this week. "The trustees concern in the budget request was to make a conscious effort to have no tuition increase."

Each year the non-resident tuition is reviewed according to state law to make sure that it reflects the cost of education.

The University's original budget request made to Gov. Hugh Gallen called for an $18 million biennial increase of the $54 million base state contribution budget. The total University Systems' budget is $100 million, 27 percent of which is state supported.

"The governor sent a request of a $2.5 million increase to the state house. He asked the House to address the salary and wage question as a separate matter.

"Base on the revenues and needs, this is the best budget, but the governor could not address salaries and wages," Pulton said.

Out of the $18 million original request, $12 million was budgeted for wages and salaries. The House recommended $5.5 to $6 million of additional state aid.

"The House Bill was very happy news," Pulton said. "It recommended almost all non-salary increases especially in current programming. The only cut would be in changed budget or new programs."

The Board of Trustees will not decide about a tuition increase until the legislature has passed the University's budget.

"We want to leave the legislature free and clear to decide the appropriations for 1979-1980. We don't want to increase tuition because the house may then cut back the budget," Pulton said.

W. Arthur Grant, the University System's secretary said he hoped the budget would be decided soon but could not predict a date.

predict a date.

"We are concerned with informing the students who are presently enrolled and the applicants who are deciding whether to come to New Hampshire," Grant said.

Working students make it work

By Laura Locke

Unlike many of his classmates, Peter Tufts will be prepared when he hits the job market next spring. Between class and studying time, the UNH junior coaches three sports at Phillips Exeter Academy.

Last year as a junior, Jane Custeau realized her finances would not cover another year of out-of-state tuition. On an impulse, Custeau placed an application in the Registrar's Office, where she was employed as a work-study student. She now works 40 hours a week as a receptionist there.

Kevin Bartlett is a self-employed market researcher, interested in resource economics. Six years ago, Bartlett was a newly married military man with more immediate dreams than a college education. He now admits to juggling work hours to meet class schedules.

Tufts, Custeau, and Bartlett are working students. At one time or another, each has had to reorganize time, redesign priorities, and on occasion, refuse a beer date in order to get everything done. And usually, they have discovered, the job comes first.

"It's not really my decision," said Tufts, a physical education major. "I've found that I can always put more time into my courses later, but if the Academy (Phillips Exeter) asks me to do something, I have to do it."

Although Tufts has to schedule classes around his work so that he is free to coach from one to five every weekday, he does not complain. The twenty-hour weeks that he puts into coaching lacrosse, hockey, and soccer have paid for his entire college education.

"The money from Exeter totally covers school," Tufts said. "I live at home so I'm only paying for tuition and books. But I enjoy working too. I think if I was only going to school there would be too many hours in the day and I'd get bored."

According to Personnel Officer Sharon Demers, approximately 250 students, other than those in the work-study program, work for the University. "There are a heck of a lot," Demers said. "I'd

Granite retains its present room

By Stan Olshefski

After a two-hour debate, the Memorial Union Building Board of Governors (BOG) granted The Granite's request to keep its present office at the Board's annual room allocation meeting Tuesday night.

Under the BOG's proposal, which passed unanimously, the Society Advocating Natural Energy (SANE) will lose its office space.

Sue Movsesian, editor-in-chief of the 1979 Granite, said the yearbook's proposed location (the Student Press office) would not provide enough room for layout work.

"The Granite is not pleased with the new location," Movsesian said. "I honestly don't feel we could operate well in that space. It's too small. It's a matter of efficiency and competency; we would be stumbling over each other."

"Every organization has had to cramp up," said Becky Ness, commuter representative and former BOG chairman. "I don't understand how The Granite is set apart from other organizations."

An amendment to the proposal was submitted to Director of Student Activities J. Gregg Sanborn and BOG Chairman Jim Connors, allowing Student Press and The Granite to keep their present offices. The amendment passed without opposition.

The amendment also called for Sigma Nu to move into the Memorial Union Student Organization's studio.

SANE's representatives did not oppose their eviction. "They (SANE) haven't been doing anything," said Connors, "but SANE, along with other student organizations, will have access to a common office."

"We have to look in the long run at what is best for all organizations," said Sanborn.

"Year after year, this particular process has met with a great deal of difficulty because there are many vested interests," Connors said. "The question at hand is what will meet the maximum number of students' needs."

ducted out of a laboratory room in Pettee Hall, "because it was the only place we could get with long tables," said Jayne Norris.

In 1978, the UNH co-op moved to the Granite and became the Great Bay Food co-op. "We wanted to reach the community instead of just students," said Norris.

All co-op decisions are decided at pot-luck dinners every second Monday. "It takes a consensus of the members before something is enacted," said co-op member Sheryl Mullenix. "This is so no one leaves a meeting feeling that they are fighting a majority."

Future plans for the co-op are the opening of a storefront "in either Dover, Durham or Newmarket," said Mullenix. "Next year, all our produce will be bought through a N.E.F.C.O. agent. This will assure us better quality produce."

power to produce electricity in Maine's Passamaquoddy Bay.

Nearly 200 people filled East-West Park in the afternoon to bask in the spring sun and listen to local musicians perform on the basketball court below them. Frisbees flew and skateboarders darted dangerously down the people-filled walkways as students enjoyed the music of Bill Borrisey, Driveway Wilson, and others.

Display tables around the edge of the park held demonstrations of solar devices, information on clean energy, and tee-shirts that exhorted "stop nuclear power," "natural energy," and "question authority." Vendors sold food and solar energy memorabilia like bumper stickers, buttons, and informational booklets.

The Clamshell Alliance set up a booth in a corner of the park to advertise their anti-nuclear stand. Anti-nuke sentiments threatened to overshadow the pro-solar intent of SunDay. Musicians sang nuclear protest songs, and speakers used the sound system to remind the crowd of the anti-nuclear demonstration in Washington, D.C. this weekend.

Moira Mulligan, member of the Solar Energy Coalition and organizer of yesterday's energy fair, expressed concern that the message of solar energy's potential would be lost in the day's strong anti-nuclear sentiments.

"You can't have anti-nukes without pro-solar," she said. "With SunDay, we are trying to show that there are alternatives to our dependence on oil and nuclear power."

Mulligan explained the difference between last year's celebration and this SunDay. "The SunDay last year was to get everybody who was interested in solar energy together. It worked. Our Solar Energy Coalition was formed last year to promote SunDay and solar energy, and we have kept on working on it this year."

As ominous storm clouds moved in shading East-West Park from the afternoon sun's rays, Mulligan remained confident about the future of solar energy.

"It has got to come," she said. "And the Solar Energy Coalition will keep on working to help it along."

all over the country," she said.

Browne said Beckwith has a "knack of choosing a good staff. I don't mean to sound like I'm bragging, but I'm from California and she hired me. We are a very cosmopolitan staff."

Although Beckwith enjoys working with her colleagues, her most fulfilling job is the supervision of student teachers in the state. "I run across old graduates and it's really fun to see them teach," she said.

One of those former students is Gail Bigglestone, director of women's intercollegiate athletics. "All of us students admired and appreciated the many ways that she enriched our lives. She is a gracious lady and a friend," Bigglestone said.

Her hair is gray and her build seems frail, but Beckwith is by no means through with the exercising programs she values.

"I live on Durham Point Road and hope to take up cross-country skiing out there."

"Also physical education is most important for the youngest, but people in homes need activity even if it's just waving their arms."

"I might teach a slimnastics program for adults," Beckwith said. "I don't know, I have lots of ideas."

JUNIORS.... EARN $650 A MONTH

If you're a junior majoring in sciences like math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about. It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate Collegiate Program (NUPOC-C for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as $650 a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll get an additional year of advanced technical education. This would cost thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy, we pay you.

It isn't easy. There are fewer than 400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have unequalled hands-on responsibility, a $24,000 salary in four years, and gilt-edged qualifications for jobs both in the Navy and out.

Call your Navy representative at (617) 223-6216 or send in the coupon. Not only can it help you complete college, it can be the start of an exciting career.

The Wall: beers and leers

senior from Portsmouth. "And the guys know you're looking at them, but they don't want to look at you and put their heads down."

A typical day on The Wall: a couple of people play backgammon, Springsteen's "Born to Run" blares from ATO speakers, a man cum minstrel plays guitar and a few people listen, others "catch rays," and some eat ice cream or drink beer.

Beer is the beverage on The Wall.

"The Wall is a great place to drink beer," said Jim McMahon, a sophomore ATO brother. "The Wall is ATO's property, so if the police walk by we just put the beer behind us on the lawn. The cops don't bother us anyway."

Sometimes The Wall is more than just a place to socialize and drink beers.

Every now and then it becomes the site of an ATO food fight. And on certain hallowed occasions, it is the stage for ATO's sacred "reindeer dance."

The "reindeer dance," in the true 30s musical tradition, gets most ATO brothers up on The Wall dancing, shorn of their trousers, which have been placed over their heads like antlers.

Underwear is optional, according to Simpson.

People roosting on The Wall is a sign of spring. All winter long, the wall-sitters hibernate, but on the first warm day in March, they return to the Wall, like returning robins on a telephone wire.

The Wall — its cement bonding is cracked and decayed. Names like Joe and Rick are carved into its tough hide. Beer bottles lie broken at its base, grass grows in its mini fissures.

It endures. A combination, hangout, freak-out and home run fence for whiffle ball games.

"Those who know the Wall, love it," said McMahon. "Those who don't, hate it."

Yah man, The Wall. You're either on it or off it.

WORKING

say two to three hundred, but even that number might be small. There's no way of really knowing."

Custeau is one of those students. Fed up with loan payments and University bills, Custeau decided last year to find a full-time job and enroll at UNH as a part-time student. In 1978, she applied for a position in the Registrar's Office where she had been working part-time. She was hired in September and has been working there ever since.

"I wouldn't say that the job is so demanding," Custeau explained. "But it was difficult to make the transition from being a student. It's really tough being a full-time student with time off one minute, and then working full-time knowing the entire day is consumed with one activity. It's difficult to manage time because I want to go home and play, not study, after I work all day. At times, I think it's easier just being a student."

Eric Johnson has been perfecting his job since sophomore year in high school. Unlike Custeau and Tufts, the junior communications major has a very irregular work schedule. Johnson is a drummer in a local dance band, "Full House."

"The unique part of being in a band," Johnson said, "is that you can never be sure of the hours. We've gone from one in the afternoon to five in the morning. It's difficult mentally and physically, and when I get back, I'm shot for the rest of the night."

What started as an experimental "gig" with a group of friends on Main Street last semester, Johnson's band now plays anywhere from one to five nights a week at clubs and special functions throughout New Hampshire.

"I've never missed an exam," Johnson said, "but I have missed studying time. This job follows me where ever I go. Unlike most jobs, playing in a band can affect your whole day. I'm really hyper before a gig and I can't concentrate on work. Afterwards it's like jet lag. I have to recover somehow."

Steven Weyrick, the manager of Jodi's Market in Durham, employed twelve University students this year. Although Jodi's not consider student status when hiring its employees, Weyrick said he would rather employ non-students.

"We've hired a fair amount of students," Weyrick laughed. "I think I'm the only one that's not. Basically, a large percentage of the population in Durham during the school year is students. Not many other people apply."

"The major problem with hiring students," he said, "is that when tests come up, studying takes priority over work. Generally, it's hard for a student to be a dependable employee."

Christie Corrigan, assistant manager of the Tin Palace restaurant, said many student employees don't take their jobs seriously.

"We've encountered a lot of problems," she said. "A lot of students don't understand that this isn't a play restaurant. They are subsidized from home and treat it like they'd treat a summer job. Work is always the first thing to go when something comes up."

Frank Thibeault agrees. The sophomore forestry major dropped two courses last semester and picked up a job as a 40 hour a week factory laborer. He has since discovered that classes, work, and active membership in Sigma Beta fraternity, have combined to make many sleepless nights. And if there is a conflict between the three, Thibeault almost always chooses school.

"If there is a choice," he said, "I usually go with school. But I think they (the factory supervisors) are catching onto me. Next time I'll probably be fired."

"It's a lot easier now," said Johnson, another Beta brother, "but I'm fighting a battle in my own mind concerning how much time I should put into the band. All I can think of is Mom, sitting at home with my grade report on her mind."

While many students hold down part-time jobs to pay for social activities and other extra costs, many students work full-time. Kevin Bartlett works 40-plus hours a week to pay for his education and household costs. If a conflict arises, the twenty-six-year-old senior says he usually works on whatever is "most important at the time."

"It's a trade off," Bartlett said. "Most of the time I give up studying. My cum suffers. Everything suffers. It really just matters where my priorities are at the time."

"Working full-time and taking a full-load is an impossibility," Thibeault said. "It would really be amazing if someone could do that."

University professors, like employers, rarely grant special treatment to students that work, Bartlett said.

"Most of my professors know that I work," he said. "But they really can't give me special treatment. It's my fault that I work."

"My professors are aware that I work," Johnson said. "But I don't know if they take it into consideration when I have a gig. I don't think it would hold much water."

Thibeault says his professors are very understanding of his "plight."

"All of my teachers know I work," Thibeault said. "My computer teacher is really lenient and helpful. He has given me extensions on several programs. But I have a paper due this week that I don't have time to do. Hopefully, my other teacher is as understanding."

Many students feel that work weakens non-academic ties to the University.

Thibeault, who commutes from his home in Dover, said he has "missed out socially" since he began work at Eastern Air last September.

"I feel like a stranger around school," said Thibeault, who is also involved in intramural hockey leagues at UNH and in Dover. "I try as much as I can to be involved. I guess I've been around a lot considering my situation."

Tufts also lives at home with his parents. As a freshman, Tufts pledged Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, a move that he now describes as "the best thing I've ever done as a commuter."

"I have a different social life than most people," Tufts laughed. "If I'm asked to chaperone a dance at Exeter, I usually bring a date from UNH."

After her eight-hour-long work day, Custeau usually heads home to Dover to try to forget UNH for the evening.

University activities," Custeau explained. "I attend some English department Writers Series but that's about it. It's nice to get out of Durham after working here all day."

Introducing Vasque Walking Shoes

Vasque
the mountain boots

We have two new shoes for the biggest and fastest growing active outdoor sport yet-- walking! Over 55 million people walk!

Most shoes aren't made for walking--but these are.

Walking demands the traction of a backpacking boot.
But VASQUE WALKING
SHOES flex where a good backpacking boot doesn't.
The tough water repellent leather upper hugs the foot with the comfort of a soft casual shoe. But its construction holds the shape long after a casual shoe rolls over. The VASQUE WALKING SHOE has a cushion insole to provide softness under foot. But it also has a steel shank to maintain the firm support a walker deserves. And VASQUE
WALKING SHOES have a special shape oblique toe that allows room for toes to spread as they naturally do in walking. In two styles- Oxford and Chukka.

Come in and try on a pair and you'll agree with us--these shoes are made for walking!

A Bronx cheer for the Noise Police

Some time in May, the Durham Noise Police will stalk the streets. Anyone caught playing music too loud will be fined. Durham Administrative Assistant Alan Edmond says the new noise ordinance is designed to deter loud music from being played from the windows of dorms, fraternities and apartments. For that, Durham deserves a great, big Bronx cheer — amplified.

Granted, occasionally the music on campus does get too loud, usually on warm days in the spring and fall. And it is true some students aren't considerate about imposing their music on other folks' ears. But open your ears Durham. This town is one of the quietest college villages around. The noise from speakers is minimal. And what there is is moderate. You want to hear pure, unadulterated noise?

Check out one of the Boston campuses. And don't the Durham police have better things to do than chase down noise criminals? And who's going to decide what's too loud and what's the proper hearing threshold? Where's the point that music doesn't soothe, but annoy? Music from windows is a fact of life on college campuses, a tradition. Most people enjoy it. UNH students, let Durham know how you feel. Because where the Noise Police lurk — can the Thought Police be far behind?

Far from the madding room lottery

Every spring, there's an unfortunate game in the bottom floor of the MUB called the Mad Room Lottery or as it's officially known—room allocation for student organizations. Obviously, each year the non-student tax funded organizations should be evaluated to determine whether or not they should have a MUB office. But the groups funded by the Student Activity

Fee (SAF) shouldn't have to worry each spring about whether or not they're going to have to move down the hall. The Granite shouldn't have had to worry about being moved. The same with the Student Press. The SAF groups are businesses. It hurts businesses to have to move often. When an organization has been entrenched in one room for a few years, it's unfair to make the group move to accommodate new and untested arrivals. What should be done is to designate those areas now used by SAF organizations as their's for as long as the organization continues to produce for the students. The other organizations should work around them. That way, there'll be fewer problems during the spring Mad Room Lottery.

Things we'd like to see

- Things we'd like to see next fall:
- New Hampshire schools receive more state aid than the University of Guam.
  - Edgar Berube rush Alpha Gamma Rho.
  - The political science department set adrift in the China Sea.
  - The Granite delay next year's yearbook and

- make a 1978-1980 trilogy.
- A calendar change made so that we have Christmas during the summer vacation.
- The Student Senate scrapped and the Student Caucus brought back.
- A commuter center built in Portsmouth so students don't have to commute to the University to use it.

- The drinking age raised to 65 and the mandatory retirement age lowered to 19.
- Doug Cox stay in school.
- The UNH-Durham fire department rent out space in the station for student parking.
- Televised MUBgate hearings by the Student Senate on STVN.

Complaint

To the Editor:

I have never felt it necessary to sit down and complain or comment about a University policy, but this time it has gone too far. A person likes to feel that he is being treated with a sense of fair play, especially if that person is paying a pretty penny for that courtesy.

This is in reference to The Department of Motor vehicles. Something should be done about their parking ticket policies. Giving parking tickets is one thing, but having a fetish for the activity is another story. That seems to be the bottom line here at the University.

I am a resident student but my home is Portsmouth. Due to outside circumstances, I as well as my brother, were forced to commute for three weeks. When this came to my attention I went to the Dept. of Motor Vehicles to purchase a parking sticker for my car.

A woman there informed me that I could not get a ticket since I am a sophomore resident student. She told me that my only alternative was to get a temporary pass each day that the car was on campus.

To make a long story short and sweet, I'll come right to the point. In the matter of two weeks, my car has been ticketed three times, for a sum total of $105. I cannot see that any of these tickets are justified, but even if they were, $105. is a bit much, to say the least.

When my brother and I found the third parking ticket today, we were infuriated. "Unrestricted parking" was checked on the ticket, and beside it was hand-written "No space." Precisely the point. I was not parked in an official parking spot for the prime reason that there were none available.

The parking permit allowed me to park the car in only one place (Storage, A lot). I drove up and down every row in that area. Now that may sound simple, but in order to do this, I had to back out of each row because there were cars parked to the very end. It was certainly no pleasure, but to top it off, I couldn't even find a space to park.

The commuter section of the lot, on the other hand, was half empty. Finally, I parked in a spot that was not a regular parking spot, making a special point that my car would not obstruct the free flow of traffic. It did not.

Since there was no other place to park in the lot that I was "given permission" to park in, what did the Department expect me to do? Drive back to Portsmouth and thumb to campus? Skip my classes all together? Wait around for someone to come and move their car?

No. I think they would have preferred that I ditched the permit. That way they could have given me another $50 ticket for having no sticker at all.

If the Department sees fit to make us pay for any or all of these tickets, I will be even more outraged than I already am. It is simply absurd that a person can't bring a car on campus for three lousy weeks of a semester without the hassle of being ticketed every few days.

I can see now why the Department wouldn't allow us to pay $5 for a parking ticket. Why should they settle for five dollars when they can get $105.

I am not the first person to be victimized by these ticket-crazy people and I probably won't be the last. But I do think that something should be done about it. The students have enough to worry about in meeting college costs. Parking paranoia need not be added to the list, or to the burden of debt.

It seems to me that we have a right to park on campus, and especially if it is only for a short time. For that matter, for the money we are paying to go to school, we should be allowed to sleep in the parking lots if we see fit.

I would like to suggest that the Dept. of Motor Vehicles pull a few of their parking lot spies out of the parking lots and put them where they might be of some benefit to the students.

Rather than looking for lame excuses to fine the students, they could make an attempt at helping.

They could start by regulating and directing traffic and perhaps save a students' life. Once the car is parked, it can't do any harm. I realize that they won't be soaking up any of our money this way, but the University is doing a fine job at that. And it would be nice to have the Department work for and with us for a change.

Kim and Mark Goodreau

Dear Dad

To the Editor:
Dear Dad,

This marks my final college letter to home after having spent four years writing to you about all sorts of activities, undertakings, and events in which I have partaken. But there are a few subjects I have neglected to talk to you about, which is why I want to share them with you today.

Classes. They were important but they never came close to answering all the questions which I formulated. In fact most of the answers came outside the hallowed walls of ivy, brick and concrete. I learned much about "the system" but I was never completely sold on lectures by tenured professors who constantly tried to convince me that everything was relative, that there was a reason for everything, and that the world was always a fair and beautiful place in which to live.

But through it all, I saw my answers slowly arrive through a different means. It was getting up at four o'clock in the morning and walking the streets of Durham. It was then that the world seemed so close to its perfect order. And it vividly reminded me of the times we had breakfast together before our fishing excursions during those misty dawns of early May many years ago.

Of course there was the time when I stayed out late, and drank too much, and did not crack a book for almost a week. But there was also the time when I stayed up until three or four o'clock in the morning talking to a troubled friend, knowing that I had a class at eight a.m. Somehow though, the "marginal propensity to consume" could not be equated to lending an understanding heart to a friend in a time of such need. I never told you about that. I never told you how much it meant to me.

I also never told you about the other failures I had as a student, as an athlete, as an officer in my fraternity, as a lover, as a friend.

But somehow you knew all along. Maybe the truth was revealed in my eyes, or in the way I spoke after having spent a summer far away from home, or in the spontaneity of a long-distance phone call, or in the way we shook hands upon every parting from home. But the fact was you knew. And you loved me enough to say nothing when saying nothing was simply the best way for me to seek the answers out myself.

I remember the day when I confronted you with my grade report indicating a flat F in Oceanography. And to this day I still recall the brief, understanding conversation which ensued:

"Going to try again?"

"Yeah." (long pause)

"Good."

And that response made me a believer again. The second time I showed much improvement. I called it "things working out for the best". I would learn, however, that it was just a matter of placing "knowledge above fear" as you displayed so many times when I was with you and afraid as a child.

And of course there was the girl who meant so much to me. You knew her. It was not a serious relationship as I thought it could have been, or as you had perhaps thought it to be. But in her own special way she became a quiet and gentle influence for me. We saw each other often, we had many laughs, and Dad, we even had lunch one afternoon in December down in Boston at your favorite restaurant in the market district, "Ye Old Union Oyster House". I'll always remember that. In fact we sat in your favorite booth—the one in the old section by the window overlooking the plaza.

Dad, we both knew I did not get into the colleges I so desperately wanted to attend. I did not obtain the athletic goals which I also desired. I did not graduate Phi Beta Kappa nor even with honors.

But when graduation day arrives and I am among the mass down on the football field I know that I shall always have something that has come only from within over the years, especially the last four. And that has been the growing love I have experienced with you. And if that is what four years and my lifetime has made me fully realize and comprehend, then nothing in this whole world could have taken its place. And that in itself was more important than going to college, any college, or even college at all.

Being the last of your four children I feel special about all that will soon occur—graduation, my trip to England, the Navy, California, because I know how important it means to you. You always wanted me to have the opportunities you never fully had. And although you never graduated from college, Dad, I salute you, as a man, as a student, and as your son for your integrity, intelligence, your sense of humor, and your love which you have shared to the fullest and I might add, which no degree could have ever conferred.

Every man has his hero in his lifetime and I know one thing, I was born to mine.

I love you, Dad.

Always and endlessly,

Jon Bewley

Films

To the Editor:

This is to commend Evan Cole, the MUSO film director (and emcee extraordinaire), on the overall choice of films screened this past year.

If I may, I'll offer a solution to the financial problems of film programming.

Why not show some truly torrid "x"-rated movies, make oodles of bucks, and use this to defray the loss incurred by really first-rate movies such as "Madame Rosa"?

Don't like that idea? Well then - - I say stick with the loss leaders.

Bikes

To the Editor:

If you rode to Adams Point, along the Great Bay and Packers Falls Road on last Saturday's Bikeride, you had an opportunity to see some of the most beautiful New England landscape in early spring.

Durham has an enlightened group of citizens and a responsive, forward-looking governing body. Durham is the first New Hampshire town to be elected TreeTown, USA; we hope it will soon be known as a bicycling town as well.

Bikeracks, safe bikelanes and extra sweepers to keep the bikelanes free of debris cost money. The total pledged (more than $1500) will go towards some of these needs, as commuters convert to less energy consuming forms of transportation.

Please turn in your check for contributions to CAT, at the MUB Outing Club Office, today, if possible, before 2 p.m.

African artforms are influential

By Andrea Coville

Warren Robbins, who graduated from the University of New Hampshire in 1945 with a degree in English, returned to Durham Tuesday night at the Elliott Alumni center.

Robbins, who is the director of the Museum of African Art in Washington, D.C., gave a slide lecture on "The Impact of Africa on Modern Western Culture."

The lecture included an exhibit of 37 photographs from the archives of the late Eliot Elisofon, Life photographer. Elisofon donated more than 150,000 photographs, films and slides on the art, land and people of Africa to the Museum of African Art.

"It's very important for the predominantly white population of American to have a better understanding of the cultural antecedents of American's black population," Robbins said.

During his lecture, Robbins demonstrated the influence of African art in artforms like dance, speech and music.

"Did you know that the Charleston is comprised of polyrhythms inherent in African dance?" Robbins asked. "Or that the word juke box comes from the African word 'Juke', meaning 'wild time?'"

Robbins proved his point further by juxtaposing paintings by Picasso, Bruke and Klee with slides of African sculpture. The influence of the African sculpture was undeniable, Robbins said.

"African art has been drawn on for many forms," he said. "It laid the groundwork for many art movements."

Robbins once worked in the state department as a cultural attache and told the audience of about 60 students, alumni and faculty how the museum was originated.

"One day as I came to work at the state department," he said, "I found that my parking place had been taken. I decided that this was the time to take my 30 pieces of African art that I had gathered in Germany and Austria, and start a museum." Robbins said he has increased the collection to more than 6,500 pieces.

Warren Robbins

The slides Robbins showed included many examples of sculpture from different peoples in Africa, and he explained the meanings behind them. One piece was of a chief's stool with legs carved in ancestral figures, which Robbins said represented an African belief of honoring one's dead relatives.

"So the chief is literally and figuratively supported by his ancestors," Robbins said.

Robbins future plans are to devise ways to use a $1 million budget that the African Art Museum received when it merged with the Smithsonian Institute. He is also having a book published, and plans to leave soon for a travel to Africa.

Interestingly enough, Robbins said he had only been to Africa once, for eight days.

The '60s: Revived for fun and profit

I didn't see Jerry Rubin when he came to UNH last week, but I did happen to run into his luggage, which told me a lot anyway, sitting there on an overstuffed chair in the MUSO office in the bottom of the MUB.

I was waiting for my friend George to finish a phone call, and in a lull in the conversation he put his hand over the mouthpiece and said, "That's Jerry Rubin's bag, you know."

It was a neat, zippered, pastel-colored bag, with an airline I.D. tag and not a single sticker or button. There was nothing hanging out, nothing unusual about. President Mills would have been comfortable carrying it to Whittier with him, I think, although I was not crude enough to look inside for dope or revolutionary materials.

It was hard to believe that this typical piece of American Tourister belonged to the Yippie leader who, in his last UNH appearance, smoked joints on the stage of the Field House and called the Washington Monument the "petrified penis of the Potomac" or something like that.

In those days Rubin was the master of the outrageous, an extremist, the epitome of the scuzzy, obnoxious freaker. (And thank God we had guys like that in the Nixon/Vietnam era!)

Now he is travelling the same lecture circuit — and carrying the same luggage — as sex therapists, Watergate ex-cons and that snake Mark Lane.

This is not to reflect on Rubin's speech, or on the MUSO speakers. But I felt uneasy when I saw Rubin's bag. The significance of it was not clear to me until I read an article on this summer's planned "Woodstock II" in upstate New York.

According to Rolling Stone, the "II" organizers are going to charge $37 for tickets to the 3-day event; each ticket holder will also receive a standardized camping/survival kit.

The organizers are also planning a perimeter fence for the festival site that will be something akin to the Berlin Wall, and will be checking cars miles away to prevent gatecrashers from getting anywhere near their goldmine. In the 60s, they would have called the latter procedure "fascist."

Klondike Annie It's rough being a messiah

It's boring, not to mention time consuming and expensive, to be a messiah. Always listening to people kavetching about murder and taxes and radiation. What do they want, miracles? I've only got my BA.

Yeah, word leaked out at graduation that I am the hope for the future. Now I have to deal with that. I can't even walk down the street anymore without someone hounding me for an autograph and "just a little miracle" to make them happy. Just the other day, some guy wanted me to train his dachshund to do the hustle at cocktail parties.

I have better things to worry about than being the hope for the future.

Like all these people are so obsessed with being their own best friends and finding themselves. I have enough trouble finding a clean pair of underwear without holes. Who knows, I might get struck by a bolt of lightning and then people would think, "what kind of a best friend could she be to herself wearing underwear like that?"

And all their causes. They're worried about whales and seals. I had a cause once, too. I became a vegetarian for a month and gained five pounds because all I ate was bread and butter. I couldn't afford fruits and vegetables.

And then there are the guys who cry for me to put an end to nuclear power. Well, golly, I have enough trouble paying my electric bill, so I end up putting all my time and energy into turning off the lights I'm not using, brushing my teeth manually and fighting my way into cans of tuna with an old fashioned church key. I even wash dishes by hand. But I guess that's because saviors are supposed to be folksey.

There isn't much I can do about taxes, either, except pay them on time because I can't afford to go to court. But at least I'm in a pretty good income bracket now, being unemployed.

And murder?

Why is everyone looking to me for answers? I've just been kicked from the nest to try out the wings I've been working on since kindergarten. Unfortunately, they are the wings of a kiwi on the mass of a mammoth.

features, etc.

It is barely possible to remember the original Woodstock, then, in all its scuzzy, outrageous hippie glory, with perhaps half the crowd of 350,000 arriving without tickets, as far from standardization as possible, and all of them surviving through cooperation, peace, and diversity, rather than with camping kits and bouncers.

Now Woodstock will be packaged, and two or three hundred thousand 70s rock fans will pay the 37 bucks, and get their official Woodstock kits, emblazoned with the symbol of the little bird perched on the guitar neck.

I ain't goin'.

The 60s are gone, long gone. But unfortunately, they did not even get a decade's rest before being revived for fun and profit.

Nobody brought up the 50s during the 60s, for they were too busy going on to bigger and better things. But in the 70s, a decade so much like the 50s in its stagnation but much more liberal and mellow in outlook, the popular culture has found it necessary to feed off its own past.

First the 50s were devoured by the Fonz and Travolta and American Graffiti, and now the 60s are going to be digested. Perhaps it will take the arrival of 1984 to jolt us out of our cultural doldrums. The only people in the 70s to fight ennui as hard as the Yippies did in the 60s are the punks. And Sid Vicious will not be around in '84 to tell us how outrageous he was, but perhaps that's a good thing.

(I wonder if there will be a "Studio 54 II". Official cocaine kits?)

Again, no knock on Rubin's speech. Without prior engagements, I might have gone to hear him speak. By most accounts his talk was excellent. I am not comparing Rubin to "Happy Days."

But I have no taste for packaged blasts from the 60s past. When the outrageousness is gone, the totality of the experience is lost. Rubin's luggage saddened me in the end.

The wistfulness of those who missed Woodstock the first time should not enrich those who wish to package outrageousness in kits.

Like hamburgers, over 325,000 sold.

Jimmy Olsen--Good luck in the land of Abe Lincoln, hope you get edjicated, but don't call me Chief.

To the NH Staff, good five issues kids--now the real work begins. Guess who.

B. Bowlofspaghefti--you're the best news headliner I've ever worked with and cleanliness is next to oddliness.

Legs Engle--Have a good summer, keep your fingers in shape and don't drown. luv, you Boss--the real one.

Tip--not you, the dog behind you. Been a pleasure working with you. Were just funny people.

To the ME twins of Hetzel--don't dip into the hallucinogenic thin line. OK?

Machine Gun Kelly--remember if you're still around next fall we'll welcome you with open arms--after all--you're the realest writer I've known at UNH. Yours in Butyl.. Sniff Linc--we missed you this year, Come back, all is forgiven. Honest. Spaceshoes.

Lisa--You've listened to me when I've been down and laughed with me through all our nutsio times. Thanks for always being there. Love, Char 5/4/79

Di- You're a vey very special big sister--because we CHOSE each other, right? And Di, I'd stand on my head to smile for you anytime. Love, Char 5/4/79

Liz and Beth- Hang in there! Our time will come, someday. From the girl standing on her head. 5/4/79

K.H.-You're the very best! Thanks for being the best buddy, roomie and roadtrip-mate (esp. south!) It's not over though--absence makes the heart grow fonder! Love, your duddy, NJG.

Mary Ann, Jean, Emily, Kim, Nancy, Carol, Gail, Laura, Joana, Marilyn, Andy, Cathy, Katne, Pam, Melissa, Cheryl, Donna-We'll miss you, You Wild Ramblin' Women. Love, the Phi Mu underclassmen. 5/4

Rich, I had the best time Saturday. The dance was terrific and the brothers of Sigma Nu are the greatest! Thanks for everything. The Mad Rodent 5/4

DEE DEE-Are you there Dee? Happy Grad. from one who loves your lovely Tushee. 5/4

Never have there been more dashing escorts than the two seafaring gentlemen of 36 Young Drive. Jay, next time I'll bring a towel, so you won't have any excuses...or could it be that you really are a "Whimpy Engineer"?/and Gary (Disco Baby) you can "Rock Me on the Water" anytime...you guys really went overboard Saturday night! 5/4

To the occupant of 29 Nimitz Place: Thanks for helping me make it through sr. yr. Had some great times. Hope there are more to come. Good luck this summer. Keep in touch. You're alright! The Rent-a-Car Kid. 5/4

Thursday morning breakfasts, National Babe Day, rainbows, "who-shoe", scratched skills, the Globe bump spot, "IFN", rebuses, brownies for Benjamin, the shoe store, "Is it 8:30 already?" and all my "Consumer Problems". "Thank you for bein' a friend." Good luck and don't forget to write. Love, ML. 5/4

ROO--Graduation time is here, but you, my friend, have one more year. Just be good and have no fear, do PASCAL and drink some beer. Now I'll have a Mortar board, as part of my B.S. award. Thanks for the Friendship that we've shared, good luck, Danielle, and hang in there. LOU. 5/4

Gary-Happy Thursdays! "That's the way she feels about you." It's been, and still is, everything. Anna, Ann, Beth, Dani, Kirk, "C", Debbie D., Sharon. You're all the Best! CBS 5/4

JODI I was quick as SILVER, MAN, in replying, huh? Thanks for my personal, HANK, and good luck hunting for an apartment. I may have found one for you! Denise. 5/4

J. No Bet! No Joke! I would like to get to know you better. Are you interested? If so, let's make contact. You know who. 5/4

TO THE GRADUATING JANICES--MAE & MYRA: If a friend is close at hand, that is best; but if she is far away, she is still there to think of, to wonder about, to hear from, to write to, to share life and experience with, and to love. Does you "doag" bite? I like the way you say that! Come see us, ok? Cuz I'll be pretty shifty around here without you! Take care, both of you, and Happy Graduation(s)! Love from your friends & cohorts, Hoop, Pilz, & Horan. 5/4

PBM: you've made me so happy and helped me realize the real meaning of love. I hope the good times continue on forever. Thanks for the great year. I love you, LSH. 5/4

E.R.B.--After four years--you'd think we'd give it up...But, NOOO we have to come back for another year. Our B.A.'s are just the end of our beginning. Good luck and congratulations Kid! Love Always, EAD. 5/4

Bets-Thanks for everything! (letter writing and delivery service included) I couldn't have made it if you weren't around just to listen. Don't forget to come visit this summer. Love, your little sister, Karen. 5/4

Maggie-Just think, 2 years ago we were freshman orientation roomies and now we're Phi Mu sisters--still together. I hope it never changes. Love, Karen. P.S. How the heck did YOU get the naive award? 5/4

Sawyer-What kind of end of the year party was that Saturday night? Come on, even YOU can do better than that. 5/4

NANC--Happy Birthday! Love, Bully, Leo, Rasberry, Yum-yum, Chuck, ITSY, Merle, Mavis, Beth, the Hamster, and the Pigs. 5/4

TO MY T: You make all my pain go away, and your love is the best medicine I could ask for. Seeing you was very special to me. You're the best there is. Thank you for being you. I'm still touched by your presence dear. I love you always, Amie. 5/4

Cheryl: Miss your wild & crazy ways. Florida hasn't got the great people that N.H. does. Can't wait to get back & party with you, Candy & Linda. Missing you all! See you in May. Beth. 5/4

Never have there been more dashing escorts than the two seafaring gentlemen of 36 Young Drive. Jay, next time I'll bring a towel, so you won't have any excuses...or could it be that you really are just a "WHIMPY ENGINEER"?/And Gary (Disco Baby) you can "Rock Me On The Water" anytime...you guys really went overboard Saturday night! 5/4

Jumpin' Jack Flash-my bestest friend! Give my love to the Starship Trooper. Too bad you don't know how to drive it! (Just kidding...) You better come up and visit this summer!-M. 5/4

To a Yankee Fan: Yes, you finally get a personal (Do I get a point for this one--that would make it 4-4, huh?) It's been quite a year. Thanks for all the special times: Midas mufflers, wine, water fights, indecision and stubbornness, Othello! Just being there and being you. P.S. A day from now will be tomorrow. Love always, S.B. Nandezski. 5/4

Jane: Let's go out and celebrate skrit, scrabble, high tide, Ziggy, Crawford Notch, Korean verb stems, pooch-pooch cushions, noise, sacking out, bilabial affricates, bilaxial interference figures, and cats in the night. Love ya, 'Leen. P.S. Congratulations. Phi Beta Kappa and Fellowship at Cornell. 5/4

A.P.K.--Let's finish this up right, GO NUTS! I don't know if I can make you an offer as high as P & W, but I'll try. Congratulations on finishing up in time--it makes celebrating extra special--just like you! Love, me.

Bird- Thanks for being a pall I think you're the best--so don't fly too far away--or at least send some messenger pigeons with a hello sometime in the future! Love, your crazy co-worker.

TRUDI PUFFER--Thanks for introducing me to grilled cheese and cole slaw. See, this semester hasn't been all bad, we've eaten quite well. And isn't it nice to see your name in print? Stick with the kid, it pays to have connections in high places. Love, your friend and mine. vol 5/4

Summer at Stonegate: Sex and drugs and rock and roll, not to mention kegs and punk! Gonna be here this summer? Be psyched to party. The pseudo, but soon-to-be housemate. 5/4

To "The New Hampshire": The American Ex-Symbol is forever indebted to the sexist, ridiculous, exacto-wielding staff of the N.H. for all kinds of useless training anduseful nonsense. Get psyched (Haul ass, kick, booty, really cook, etc.) for a quiet year! Love and kisses, "R.H." 5/4

Adrian, Beth, Susie, Becky & Whit: Thanks for making this year my best and rowdiest! Without you 'Born to Run' would never have been performed. Remember all the wild times. I love you all! Di!

IRENE: Big Sisters like you are hard to find. We've grown together from marching on Sangria to trust walks and Tequila--from a colorguard that rates to late P.D. dates. You're the greatest! Love always, DI. 5/4

Dear Don Ray, Ron slow, and An Ton: you have been wonderful pen and ink mentors. -A mentee. 5/4

Dear Gordie the Rumrunner: Keep your booties on in Washington this weekend. Love Daisy Buchanan. 5/4

Dear Libby K.: Hope you're (you are, you are) having fun at U. Wash! Don't terrorize too many discos. Love, your soon-to-be alumni Roomie, Rosie. 5/4

Dear Bridget: Bon Voyage. J'espere que tu avals un plus que plus annee! Love, R.H.D. 5/4

Hey Wilson! Lau-Belle, nobody does it cheaper. What a carcuss. M&M land was a thrill with you. Junk mail forever. Congrats on the car and wedding. Love, Room. 5/4

Dearest Cheeks--N.S. number 208 DI, number 51 was double D. and C.C. Peggy's Cove - and our own rock-Next summer or sooner. Love. L. 5/4

KATY: I wanted to be creative and original, but les 7:00 am English papers have burned me out. You know I'll miss you, kiddo. Please visit me in Maine--we'll toast our efforts at quilting "the club". Much love always, Laura. 5/4

To the girl who has my solved problems in CALCULUS 425 from last year, please call me at 868-1219 or send them to P.O. Box 64 Durham--KIKIS. 5/4

JT Bee!, What it is. What it was, What it will be? It will be a dyno summer at 30 Fisher. Its been a gas so far. Swill Brothers Unite. 5/4

Tony Marathon Man--Thanks for a super weekend, I really enjoyed it. By the way, that's a great little car you have! D.G. 5/4

GIBBS THIRD: Happy to have had you all on the floor this year. Has been an enlightening experience! Love from you Resident Ass., babysitter, counselor and troubadour, Your friend Kim. 5/4

Male Shirts: Jack, your commentating rivalled Cosell, Charlie, you sure did carry that chariot well, John, thanks to you we made it over the wall, Peter, we're glad you didn't let that egg fall. Scoff no one could match the ability you show with that awesome keg throw. Shall we defend the title next year? Female shirts. 5/4

MARTY Happy 20th--You're legal! Eye-to-Eye contact! Let's Rock! Pass those finals! Get psyched for summer! I'll miss you muchly. Love, Maria. 5/4

FOX YO MADDOG Picnics, Cape Action, Rafts, Shanty, Skiling, magic bracelets, Fpschnapps and of course our good friend Ricy Grace. Can't wait to lose it on graduation. We'll miss ya, your good friends. 5/4

FE676--My bestest buddy--Another hectic year is over, our third summer is about to begin; much needed for us. Looking forward to Wa-Wa-ville and those brookies! Love, your Sunday-go-to meeting bun. 5/4

K. & D. We know your secret, and want you to know that we think its grand! Continue to share, care and devote yourselves to each other and happiness and joy will be yours forever. Your good friends M & M. 5/4

Fickle Friend--Through our ups and downs, it's been sometimes bad, more often, good. One more compromise before we reach alumnus status? 5/4

TO EVERYONE AT KRIS FARM--Words can not express the appreciation I have for each of you. Without your help I may not have been able to keep my puppy, & probably never would have met all of you. I know how hard it must have been through times of: torn pillows, barking in the morning (& sometimes afternoon & night), suddenly dirty clothes, dug up holes, & painstaking trips to Durham to look for the little devil! I don't know how I'll ever be able to thank you for all the trouble you went through. But I want to say that when I'm settled in LAKE PLACID, you are ALL welcome, whenever you want, to sight-see, ski, or just visit. I mean it! & I hope to see you all up there! Thanks again for everything. Love, Pam. 5/4

Ma see you with COZ when they light the lamp. I predict to knock you out in three, wimpy secret weapon. See you there & bring your sicilian good luck charm. 5/4

LEENY--Happy Birthday a couple of days late. I know you didn't get drunk but you did make a few quarters. It's gonna be a long time before the next one so live it up. Love Les. 5/4

C.G.--Can't believe a great year's almost over. I'll miss the late night talks & being silly. Don't worry, many good times to come--you know me, I can't (won't) let go. Lots of love, Your favorite roomie C.K. 5/4

Dave W.-Your first personal. Does this top 5 notes on the door? Thank you for the shoulder--really needed it! C.K. 5/4

Beth: Remember to keep your eye on the ball. Becky: I hope the doctor can do something about your gas problem so passersby don't have to listen to your "outbursts". Sue: Thanks for letting me listen to Gordon Lightfoot with you. Annie: don't have to many "o's"--you may not be able to stand up. Leenie: Keep an eye on ATO for me and thanks for keeping me sane(?) this semester. To the rest of the 1st floor (east wing) loonies: Good bye, good luck, and thanks! Your secret senior admirer. 5/4

PC. Art, Tuna, Hank, Wally, Dot, and the rest of the guys at the "Big 5"--I really will miss you guys. These four years have been quite an experience in growing and learning. Love you always, JR. 5/4

To my secret admirer: Thanks for the invite to the Exeter party but I'm afraid this weekend is booked solid. As a matter of fact the rest of this semester is pretty hectic, but don't worry, I'll smile through it all. Mary Anna 5/4

Poor cookie, one more year gone by and you still haven't gotten a personal. But think about it, who in their right mind would send a personal to an over-the-hill nudibranch--nut like you? O.K. So no one said I was sane. Care for a Sunday morning Crossword Puzzle? Banana. 5/4

TO ALL THE WILD ONES: Petre whos always tired but still chasing--don't rock the boat Thursday, Redness you own stock in Budweiser, don't you? The old Madbury Maniac, may you sober up soon, (puking & porking is pretty low, ya know). Ack's dad, the little squirt, is psyched for Cape rays and impudent oysters: Octoberfest is best in October! But wait until Saturday night--go ape, grab a beast because its a jungle out there. Be bad, Lov'n, the Wamp-Woo kid. 5/4

To Kevy, Dave, Foo-Boo, Scoo-Scoo, Joey, Dan, and Doug: Hi you A.J.'s! Thank for a fantastic year. Well always remember rolling cows, pizza parties, "stereo", Christ-mas & roses!! Sex talks, EMMENSE, Ups & Downs in 206, wriling up & making up, wasted days & wasted nites, Hockey fans, MUB PUB, Strip Poker & Bedroom Fights, and Good Times! Get psyched for Red Sox & August! We love ya- Doods, Grech, Dawn & Karen. 5/4

Big Teddy Bear: Growing pains, telephone bills, Boston-Durham, "Love is...". Florida tans, nuke talks...we made it to number 2! Love always, Your little teddy bear. 5/4

Roger G. Have a Happy Birthday and tell that roommate of yours to keeps sending the checks! Keep sober Henry...Love, Kath. 5/4

Well you dillies really know how to party, last Saturday night was the greatest. I can't wait for this Saturday night with "The Games" in concert and your super cheap refreshments. Go wild boys! See you Saturday the 5th at 2:00. Your Devine head resident. 5/4

To the grads of Sigma Beta we all bid farewell, watch for curve balls in the fast lane and raise a little hell. Best of luck guys - Malph. 5/4

Critter It has been a great year! You are really SUPER. I love you a whole bunch! Get psyched for summer. Ed. 5/4

Jeff, Jane, Bryce, Kathi, Doug, and Steam: Breakfast club has been fun--but shouldn't we start serving Bloody marys to begin the celebration? Love, Your other roommate. 5/4

Cookie Monster and Owl: It's been a long haul but we finally made it--and to think it all started on the 8th. While I get a BA you both get MRS degrees--I'm psyched for ya. You two are tremendous--Love ya, B. 5/4

Erin-Here's one for you, too. You're the best and I'm glad we'll be around next year--the rug rat regiment is starting! Thanks for everything. Love, Beth 5/4

Pat and Ginny-Thanks for being really super roommates--I'm gonna miss you next year--Be good and take care. Love ya, Beth. 5/4

Corns and Goose (oops! I mean Geesel) We'll never see you guys again--OH NO! Maybe you'll get a few scenic postcards from us scrawled in sidewalk cafe's on the Mediteranean. In any case, keep your legs crossed and mouth closed and you'll be safe without us. Love Trace and Ame. 5/4

Hey number 17--How about a blue plate special? The price only BN 331. Your loss is my gain...5/4

BOBBY G. ORR--Thanks for a great year. Don't work too hard this summer, or you'll have to rest all next year. You're really super. Love, Karen 5/4

Norman S.: Hey, goddamn, I know you're a liberated man. Don't let this inflate that delicate ego of yours--I know it won't. Much something--Harley's most beautiful waitress at 3 a.m. 5/4

I am looking for a person or people to bicycle through Europe for 5-6 weeks starting after finals. If interested call John 749-2844 after 9:30. 5/4

Musketeers--Thanks for making our first year great. You are the closest friends anyone could have, I'm so lucky to have you as mine. 229 & 223 are the greatest. Have a super summer. "All for one and one for all" - One of the four 5/4

SOPH: Congratulations you made it! Thanx for being there all the times you were. You're the best in three years we've been through a lot and I wouldn't have had it any other way! Thanx for everything! Love, G 5/4

"Surf": Thanx for making this semester extra-special. Congratulations for 4 years well done. Just wait, the job will come to you soon. You're the greatest! The world is yours! Love, Roomie 5/4

LaCroix! You made it! Congratulations! Bermuda or Bust! Whatever, I wish you happiness. Thanx for being the great friend you are! Go wild! Love, Roomie 5/4

To the seniors of Alpha Chi Omega: Congratulations! I'm going to miss all of you! You're the best! Good luck and get psyched to go wild! Even though you already are! Love GD & DB 5/4

ALEXANDROVNA--"Don't go changing...I want you just the way you are." This year has been a trying one for sure, but I like to think of it as a good one overall. Let's forget the bad times and remember the good for we haven't had enough of them. What's done is done. So let's look to the future. In 3 years I've never met anyone like you and I never will again (you know what I mean). I love you. Signed, Your cat's Dad. 5/4

MICHELLE BAKER--Heard you took my advice the other day and sat in the sun. I've heard it's supposed to be great therapy. Have a good summer, and don't do any LAND-SCAPING where you might twist an ankle all over again (Heaven forbid). And DON'T WORK TOO HARD!!! (We know what a lusty you have for sweat and pay checks). WOB--WOMAN don't laugh, or I'll come to the NE Ctr. and give you a hard time. 5/4

Mini-Wheat--long time, almost over huh? See you next week? Hope you reap the fruits and have a good summer (that'll be the beef sirloin, a side of french fries, and a large Tab please.) Congratulations and good luck in the future. GM. 5/4

Mariana--where the hell have you been hiding? Have a good summer and don't work too hard. Stay out of PCAC if you can. And take it easy on the Amaretto! 5/4

Ramjet--thanks for a good last year and a half. You're still the worst with the white guk on your face at night. Take singing lessons, maybe they'll help (I doubt it.) If you have trouble breathing this summer, pull out the Harrisburg gas mask and hope for the best--Malph. Biff! 5/4

Brett, Ginny! Get Psyched for an excellent year in Ads. Prospects?? Boston? New York? L.A.? Have a wonderful summer! Joanie 5/4

J. -- Happy 23rd Birthday! This semester has been so much fun, thanks to you. Get ready for more fun and good times this summer. Love, 1/2 pint. 5/4

From one Moore to another, here ya' go-my first, last, and only peronal. You've done a hell of a job--I wish I could be here to see you finish. My final words of wisdom: use J.C. for all he's worth--he's good for you--but dammit, girl, get out of your rut! I wish I had. All the love to you, kid. Enjoy the good times. Take care. S. 5/4

Chris-Get psyched for the first annual bong-a-thon. Whatever the outcome we'll both be wearing sunglasses for a week. Remember: Ma knows best! May the best smoker win. Good luck Ma. 5/4

ROY -- Happy Birthday to the one who means so much to me. Love ya always, Kathy. 5/4

Dear Mr. Blue Eyes of TKE, who thinks he is charming even at 2:30 a.m.--What has happened to my blue down vest; your not going to charm your way out of this one. Just because you didn't get your porridge, doesn't mean I can't have my vest! Signed, Goldilocks. 5/4

-CAN: Thanks for the personal! After 4 years, we're finally graduating! Remember all the fun times in Stoke (the purple light, the water fight, etc.) and MCL. Even tho we didn't get to see each other as much this year, a friend is a friend for always. Love, A. 5/4

To DZ: Thanks for making the last three years ones that I'll never forget. I'll miss you all, but I'll be forever indebted to you for making me an experienced woman of the world. Lots of love from the girl who grew up in a paper bag. 5/4

Space and Chef: GOOD TIMES we have had, for all kinds of useless training and useful times. I love you all! Di. 5/4

Debbie D. Happy Birthday, weirdo. You actually made it to the big 21. Have a good summer. I'll miss you. Kath. 5/4

Mark C.: Thanks for the talk the other night--I'm so glad we had it. Get psyched for the Sem! Have a good summer and I'll miss you and your guitar! Love, K. 5/4

Queen Boo!o--You've been the bestest of best buddies & I love you for it. Seabeach, Merits, Men and much more - thanks - Whit. 5/4

Furn the Turkey Turd - I'm allowed only 30 words so how about just THANK YOU! Lado- Chef. 5/4

LYNNE JUSTER: Thanks for being the best little sister ever. Remember sexy negligees, non-bombarded rooms, "be published", golly, going "nuts", walks around campus, the P.D. I'll miss you tons. Love forever & always, D. 5/4 meters. He is also listed to run a leg on the mile relay.

TO THE GUYS NEXT DOOR AND THAD: Thanks for the memories and the WILD times. Food fights (close eviction), April Fools, late nights, dinners, breakfasts, Mr. Wiggly, farm life, birthdays, sun roof parties, movies and cops, nerds, dancing, sex, drugs, P.D.'s, hats & boogying will always be cherished! Get psyched to BE BAD at the JUNGLE. The girls at 23 Main St. 5/4

In the 1500 meters, sophomore Guy Stearns looks to be an outside favorite. He has been running well all spring and has developed a kick that has left most of the competition gasping in that last quarter. Last year, he finished sixth in the mile.

In the sprints, Lee Pope and Jim Warren have been turning in some fast times and both will also carry a leg on the 400 meter relay. Freshman Pete Bergeron, fresh off a personal best of 49.2 in the 400 at Dartmouth, has a good shot at a high place in that event this weekend. He'll have some tough competition in the form of BU's Glen Cohen, a 1976 Olympian for England and winner last year of both the 220 and 440 yard dashes.

Mark Berman in the steeplechase, Don Belcher in the 400 intermediate hurdles, Pete Bonde in the javelin and Philo Pappas in the 5000 meters are also good bets for places.

tage of the situations to score," noted UNH coach Ted Garber. "The shots aren't on the cage, we don't take the open shot, we just don't take advantage of the situation."

"We had the opportunities," continued Garber. "We'd get a shot and it would just miss the cage. They'd (opponent) get the ball back and come down and score."

But it wasn't all bad in the start despite the Green scoring first at 32 seconds. UNH responded fourteen seconds later to tie it 1-1.

The procedure was repeated when Dartmouth went up 2-1 at the 1:48 mark and the Wildcats knotted the score 2-2 less than three minutes later.

But Dartmouth stiffened up and scored four unanswered tallies to lead 6-2 after the first quarter.

UNH stayed within distance as Dartmouth scored twice while the Cats tallied just once, but it was enough that the 8-3 lead would be tough to decrease.

"Once they (Dartmouth) got up by five or six goals, their confidence increased and it was too difficult to catch them," said Garber. "In the beginning it was pretty much even."

Again, the scoring wasn't there. Presented with seven power play opportunities, the Wildcats failed to convert on a single one.

In comparison, the Cats had just one penalty, late in the fourth quarter, but they held Dartmouth off the board throughout the fourth quarter with goalie replacement Rick Jenkinson.

"There was no sense to Peter (Sheehan) getting murdered," said Garber. Sheehan had 11 saves while facing thirty plus shots.

"Peter had a lot of one-on-ones.

I also wanted to give Rick a chance to get in before playing against Vermont on Saturday.

UNH, presented with 36 power-play opportunities in the last four games, has only converted on ten.

"We've cut down the number we receive, letting them get called for it (a penalty), but we haven't done the third part — score," said Garber.

"The last four games have shown we can stick handle, but what it comes down to is speed," Garber said. "We have to have speed to compete in New England for the championship."

But with that out of the question now, the Wildcats will focus their aim at Vermont, a fairly young team.

"We can't just go out there and beat them," said Garber. "We have to play like it's for the championship. "You can't look back, you have to look ahead," he added.

Runners get satisfaction

struggling against and with themselves.

"It's the only sport you can work yourself into totally," said Kinney. "You don't need that much natural ability to succeed within yourself."

"I didn't expect too much out of it," Janos says. "It got discouraging sometimes, having a good race one meet and a bad one the next. The bad ones bum me out...for about ten minutes, then I just forget about it and cheer for everyone else."

The team. Track, as in cross-country, is a series of personal confrontations, individual battles to be fought against the competition and against the self. But the final score is a collective result of those tests. A team effort.

"If I run well and we lose, I feel bad," Janos says. "If I run badly and we win, then I'm happy for everyone else."

"Sometimes I say I'd like to just watch. I've tried but I feel different. When I compete, I'm more involved with what's going on. It's a thrill to be there."

The move back outdoors, like spring, has found Janos and Kinney in full bloom. They are close friends now and often train together. They still race each other in the home meets, putting out all they have, pushing themselves to their limits. And when the race is over, they're back at trackside shouting encouragement.

"They're always there," said miler Philo Pappas. "Right down to the last event, cheering everybody on."

"I really respect them," said distance runner Mark Berman. "It takes a lot of dedication to come out and practice everyday and compete in the same races with 4:20 milers."

Says Janos, "Even when you can tell you won't be a factor in the race, which happens a lot to me, you still feel nervous. And coach Copeland, he still comes up and says 'have a good race.'"

"I take it as an outlet," explains Kinney, "a way of releasing tension. A lot of the engineers take school too seriously, but as long as I have enough breathing room grade-wise, I like to direct my energies to other things."

"I think you can accomplish as much with a variety as you can with a single focus."

"I need people as a source of motivation," Janos said. "If I have to meet somebody to run 15 miles then I'll do it. There's an obligation involved. Same thing if there's a track workout scheduled for 3:30. I'll be there."

"I use it as an outlet too but I love to compete," he continued, "even if it's just in the slow heats or something. My ultimate goal is a marathon. I don't have any speed, don't ask me why because I've tried awful hard to develop some. But my endurance is good. I could kick myself for missing Boston."

"They're knowledgeable about the sport," says UNH track coach John Copeland. "They know what times and distances are good for respective events. They're always on top of they guys' performances."

After three seasons, the last home meet two weeks ago marked the end of their first year track debut. What about next year?

"Sure I'll be back," Kinney says with a smile. "I'm a perfectionist. I believe that with enough hard work you can do anything you want."

Janos' eyes drift back out to the empty parking lot. The rain has let up and the air, through the open window, feels hazy and moist.

"I'll run like crazy this summer," he says thoughtfully. "It's a part of me now. I know I'll have to stop eventually, but it'll be tough."

Damn near impossible.

Track team travels to YC championships

By Gary Crossan

The UNH mens track team travels to Kingston, Rhode Island, Friday, for the 1979 Yankee Conference Championships.

According to coach John Copeland, Boston University is the favored team having defeated defending New England champs, Northeastern at the Greater Boston championships last weekend.

Among individual events, the strongest looking one for the Wildcats is the hammer throw. Lou Porrazzo is the defending champion. Last year, Porrazzo, Alex Miller and Ken Cambell swept the top three places. Both Miller and Porrazzo have taken the top two places in every meet this year, with the former coming on very strong in the past couple of weeks.

Senior John Demers suffered a strained hamstring last week at Dartmouth but as of Thursday he still felt ready for Saturday's 800

ed. During the summer he plays in the Cape Cod League, where some of the top college talent in the country play baseball.

"Jeff has as much natural ability as anyone we've ever had here," said Ted Conner, now in his 14th year as UNH coach. Conner has coached such major leaguers as Rich Gale, last year's Rookie-of-the-Year in the American League with the Kansas City Royals and Red Sox catcher Carlton Fisk.

Whitty, a 22-year-old physical education major (exercise specialist), is the lead-off hitter in the UNH lineup and is the key to the Wildcats' success, according to Conner. "When he gets on base, we have a chance of winning, when he doesn't, we don't," said Conner.

Whitty said it is satisfying after those rough years to finally have a contending team. But he knows that what the baseball team has done this year is largely because of its own effort. Their spring trip to Florida was financed by raffle ticket sales — very little money from the men's athletic department is channelled to the baseball program.

"We want it badly for ourselves," said Whitty. "We don't get much backing from the University. Andy Mooradian (UNH men's athletic director) has only gone to one game all year — last Monday against Plymouth State — and that was only because there was a football scrimmage going on at the same time."

Whitty said there is much more team togetherness this year than in the past. Informal team meetings sometimes take place at one of the players' apartment after a game.

"We're a lot closer this year," he said. "Everybody on this team likes to be together. And we're winning it for the guys who played during the years when we had hard times — not so much for the University. They didn't back us. We're doing it for our own self-pride now."

was replaced on the mound by freshman Marianne McNamara. A fifth run scored on a wild pitch but UNH managed to retain its lead when shortstop Mary Ryan, secondbaseman Colleen Bean, and firstbaseman Foster combined for the Wildcats' second double-play of the day.

In the fourth inning the Wildcats loaded the bases with singles and scored four "insurance" runs on a passed ball, a hit, and a Maine error.

The "insurance" was well needed. Maine tallied one run in the fifth inning and three more in the seventh when McNamara walked four batters allowing one run to score, and hurled a wild pitch that resulted in two more. Terry Birmingham ended Maine's hopes for a comeback catching a fly ball to left field for the third out.

SPORT SHORTS

Coach of the year

UNH hockey coach Charlie Holt has been named the National Division I coach by the American Hockey Coaches Association.

The announcement came Wednesday night at the AHCA convention in Orlando, Florida. This marks the third time in eleven years that Holt has received the award. He also received it in 1969 and 1974.

Earlier this year, Holt was named the New England Coach of the Year by the New England Hockey Writers' Association.

Holt guided the 1978-79 Wildcats to the ECAC championship and a berth in the NCAA final four, the second time in three years. The team's record of 22-10-3 gives Holt an 11 year mark of 231-104-10, far and away the best mark ever in UNH history.

Football captains named

Offensive guard Phil Estes and linebacker Greg Donahue have been elected co-captains of the 1979 University of New Hampshire football team.

UNH Coach Bill Bowes made the announcement as the Wildcats wind up four weeks for spring practice.

Estes is a two-year starter at the right guard position. The 6'1", 240 pound former all-state selection at Laconia High has won second team all-Yankee Conference honors for his play in the offensive line.

Donahue is also a two year starter and is one of the few members of the UNH team to have earned a varsity letter as a freshman. The hard hitting 6'2", 235 pound inside linebacker has led the team in tackles each of the last two seasons.

Women swimmers

Two members of the UNH women's swim team will be participating in events of a different nature this summer.

Co-captain Mira Dabrowski, who is graduating this year, is currently training for the modern Pentathlon Nationals, to be held in Texas the first week in July. The competition will consist of five events: pistol shooting, Epee Fencing, running, swimming, and horseback riding.

"A lot of swimmers get involved in something like this," said Dabrowski's coach Carol Lowe, "and Mira has a good combination of swimming and fencing." Dabrowski finished 13th in the nation in last year's Pentathlon, in which she competed in four out of the five events.

Freshman distance swimmer Laura Hayes, on the other hand, is training for something a little closer to home. On July 21, Hayes will compete in a four-mile ocean swim from Woodshole to Martha's Vineyard.

The race is an invitational swim, with one representative from each of 25 area schools, and will benefit the Doreen Grace Fund for brain research. Hayes has experience in distance swimming, but only in fresh water, according to Lowe. "I really want her to make it," said Lowe, "that would be an achievement in itself."

Women take quad

It was a perfect way for the UNH women's track team to warm up for this weekend's New England, dominating a quadrangular meet between Bowdoin, Colby and a partial team from UMaine-Orono.

The Wildcats literally ran away with the meet (UNH 120, Bowdoin 46, Colby 36, UMaine 29) taking firsts in all but one of the track events and placing consistently in the field events. In total, UNH broke five Bowdoin Field House records.

Jo Ann Pavoglio captured both the mile and two mile, covering both distances in personal bests of 5:17.4 and 11:28.4, respectively.

Mary Ellen Letvinchuck led a Wildcat sweep of the 100 yard hurdles at 15.6. Amy Towle was second and Millie Pelletier was third. Letvinchuck and Towle would finish second and third respectively in the 400 hurdles.

Missy Collins, who anchored a record setting mile relay team of 4:09.2, also set a Bowdoin track record with a 59.1 first place in the 440. Collins also ran in the 4x100 relay (Michelle Fahey, Cathy Rosholt, Betsy Harris and Collins) which also set a Bowdoin record (51.7 seconds).

Betsy Harris, who took the 100 meter dash in 12.4 was another to score a track record with a 25.5 gallop in the 220.

Diane Pankratz was the last to a record, this one coming in the 880 with a time of 2:19.2.

Cathy Rosholt could take only a third place in the shot, but Towle and Jane Boyle finished two and three in the long jump and Pelletier and Harris did the same in the high jump. Rosholt also took a second in the discus.

UNH then finished up its series and seconds and thirds when Martha Fox and Denise Visco placed in those respective positions in the javelin.

Sunday, the team will be down at Springfield College to compete in the day long New England. The meet is scheduled to start at 9 a.m.

Two enthusiastic runners

Success is getting what you want. Happiness is wanting what you get.

Gerald Heard

By Gary Crossan

It has been two weeks since he last took to the roads. The rain is pounding down outside his window now and he sits looking forlornly out onto the puddle-marked parking lot.

"I'm really itching to get running again," says freshman Dave Janos, turning in his chair and suddenly brightening. He glances back outside. The forlorn look is gone.

Janos and buddy Jim Kinney compromise a prolific pair, what UNH distance runner Pete Foley calls, "the most enthusiastic guys on the team."

Half-miler Don Deroo says they are "definitely two of a kind." Other members of the UNH track team express their appreciation of Janos and Kinney's shouts of encouragement during their races. "It's always nice to have teammates cheering you on," says Foley. "And you know they're always there."

The dynamic duo.

It all started last fall during the cross-country season, when both were fledgling newcomers.

"I had a low key attitude at first," remembers Janos, a business major from Watertown, Mass. "I was never really good in high school but I didn't want to stop running. I knew I'd have trouble adjusting to college competition, but I just wanted to run."

"I love cross-country," he continued. "I was just glad to be out there, to meet the guys. They were great, the coach was great. It was a real thrill just to be running with them. That's how I met Red."

Red (Kinney) is a sophomore electrical engineering major from Merrimack, N.H. This was to be his first attempt at a running competition of any kind. Despite being from a running family, he had been involved in the sport less than a year.

"I never went out for track in high school," he said. "Running five miles scared me. I always wanted to be a baseball player. A friend and I were going to go down to Florida after we graduated to try out. We never made it though."

"I've played a lot of sports," continued Kinney. "I was going to try out for soccer here but when I saw the best guy from our high school was always on the bench, I decided to forget it. I guess I fell into running because of my dad and my sister. I ran all that summer. My goal was to make the cross-country team."

Both did make the UNH squad and ran in a few of the home meets, often racing against each other. As Janos had feared, the competition was indeed tough and both of them would inevitably finish several minutes behind the leaders. But they persevered, sometimes happy and surprised with their performances, sometimes discouraged.

"You can't keep up with them (the top runners) that's for sure, though I do try sometimes," Kinney said. "When I don't do well it really affects me but it's the team you're ultimately trying to help. It's all part of the team effort."

When fall turned to winter, cross-country moved indoors to the track. Every week Janos and Kinney showed up for a speed workout with Mark Berman, Guy Stearns and John Demers. Though they would sometimes get lapped during the intervals, the duo ran as hard as they could.

Every week they toured their fifty miles around the snow-covered roads of Durham. And at the home meets, they were there too, running the non-scoring mile,

Jim Kinney (left) and Dave Janos give it their all at every track meet, whether running or cheering on teammates.

UMass trounces laxwomen, 9-2

By Lee Hunsaker

It took nearly four years to happen, but the UNH women's lacrosse team finally lost a game. Yet, what is even more surprising is they lost by a lopsided score of 9-2.

UMass had the honors of distinction in creating what UNH coach Jean Rilling termed "a coach's and players' nightmare."

"I just can't believe it happened," she continued, "and I still really don't know what the reason is."

Tomorrow, however, UNH will have a chance to avenge itself of Wednesday's performance when they meet Rhode Island in the first round of the New England tournament.

UNH is seeded second in the tourney. URI is seventh out of a seven team division. The number one seed and host team, Yale, has a bye in the first round.

Yale was seeded above UNH despite the Wildcats' nation leading statistics. But the Elis didn't live up to the standing for long as they dropped a 6-5 contest to number four Harvard earlier this week.

UNH should it win against URI, will play the winner of the Brown-UMass game late Saturday afternoon.

Wednesday, the "game belonged to UMass," according to Rilling.

Minuteman Jean Hackett led the rout with three goals. She was followed by July McHugh and Marjie Anderson, each with two and Carrie Nickerson and Gail Hutchinson with one apiece.

Senior Beth Wheatley was the only offense threat of the day for UNH, pocketing both goals, one in each half.

"We helped to make them look good," said Rilling. "Their coach told me after the game that that was the best they (UMass) had played all year. They did nothing wrong and we did nothing right."

At half time it was 2-1, but by the ten minute mark of the second half UNH trailed by a 6-2 mark. Wildcat goalie Suzanne Rousseau, who before the contest led the northeast in goals against and save percentage, was peppered throughout the game by 24 UMass bids.

Now 7-1, UNH looks to reverse its poor showing on Wednesday in the New England. A sweep in the Yale Bowl will undoubtedly form a path to the national tournament at Penn State on May 11-13.

Softballers win two

By Dina Engalichev

The UNH women's softball team closed out its season Tuesday sweeping a doubleheader from The University of Southern Maine, 7-0 and 12-9. The women post a final season record of 7-9.

In the opener UNH tallied nine hits and played errorless ball to come away with the shut-out.

Maine got its only hit of the game on sophomore pitcher Lisa Cefalo in the top of the seventh inning with two outs, robbing the UNH hurler of a no-hitter. Cefalo's sterling performance was highlighted by seven strike-outs.

Cefalo, backed by a strong defensive unit that turned out a double play in the first inning, never allowed more than four Maine batters to step up to the plate in any inning.

The second game looked almost like a repeat of the first until the third inning.

UNH took an early lead scoring two runs in the first inning and four in the second while holding Maine scoreless.

In the third inning Maine took advantage of five walks, a wild pitch and a UNH fielding error to score four runs. With the bases loaded and no outs, Diane Delisle

Senior-freshman tandem leads Wildcats

By Paul Keegan

Jeff Whitty was all set to break the UNH record for most hits in a season. After all, he had just gotten his 33rd hit — a single against Plymouth Monday — to tie him with Ken Billings (1977) and the Wildcats had a doubleheader coming up the next day against Holy Cross.

As luck would have it, however, Whitty stepped to the plate eight times Tuesday and didn't get a single hit. Meanwhile, teammate Jim Wholley continued the hot hitting that has made him the leading hitter on the team as a freshman (.415), picking up five hits on the day to edge out Whitty and break the record.

"It looked like if anyone was going to break the record, Jeff would do it," said Wholley. "I wasn't even thinking about it. After the game, somebody mentioned it to me."

Wholley and Whitty — one a freshman, the other a senior — have been two big reasons why the UNH baseball team is talking playoffs for the first time since 1974, when Rich Gale and the Wildcats were second in New England.

In Tuesday's second game against Holy Cross (UNH lost the opener, 9-2), Wholley singled in the tying run in the seventh inning, then scored himself on a suicide squeeze bunt by Jim MacDonald to give the Cats a 6-5 decision and a key Division I win to up their record to 21-9.

Wholley ended the game in dramatic style, crashing into Crusader catcher Rick Allen, who had the ball waiting for him. Both players were sent sprawling, the umpire ruled safe, despite vehement objections from Allen and Holy Cross coach Jack Whalen.

Wholley is leading the team in runs batted in (22) and total bases (46) in addition to having the top batting average and most hits on the squad. He is making people wonder if someone should look into the genetic makeup of Kathleen and John Wholley of Haverhill, Mass. to see how they do it.

Jim's brother Steve, of course is one of the most gifted athletes at UNH. An All-Conference quarterback who owns five school records, Steve is the second-leading hitter on the baseball team with a .354 mark and owns a 5-2 pitching record.

"Not many people have the chance to play baseball with his brother — and have him do so well," said Steve. "I thought he'd be one of our better players, but I didn't really expect this."

Steve, who is five years older than Jim, hasn't played on an organized team with his brother before. "I really enjoy it," he said. "Sometimes I help him out, but there's some things he's got to learn on his own."

Jim has caught on quickly. An excellent hitter with two strikes on him, the younger Wholley has shown an ability to spray line drives to all fields and possesses a strong throwing arm in left field.

"It's kind of hard to believe," Wholley said of his success. "I made the trip down to Florida and I guess the coach thought I did pretty well. I couldn't believe I was starting the first game."

"I didn't come here trying to prove anything. I just tried to hit the ball, tried to make contact — I hate striking out. The balls just started to fall in."

A defensive halfback in high school, Wholley tried out for the UNH football team but sat the year out because of shoulder problems. He said he doubts he'll try out for football next fall. Instead, he want to play fall baseball.

While Jim Wholley came to school at UNH this year and found a playoff-contending baseball team, things were a lot different when Jeff Whitty arrived in Durham four years ago.

Whitty, the all-time UNH base-stealing champion with 33 thefts and a solid .330 hitter this year, weathered three losing seasons with such records as 6-23 (1976), 14-20-1 ('77) and 10-12-1 ('78) before finally being on a playoff contender. For him and the other five seniors on the team, this year has been a dream come true.

"It feels real good," said Whitty. "The best part was going down to Florida this spring and beating those teams (UNH went 5-2). The last time we went down there was my freshman year and they killed us. They thought they were something else."

Whitty has been scouted by Los Angeles, Texas, Philadelphia, and Boston and hopes to be draft-

Laxmen stopped by the Big Green

By Gerry Miles

The UNH men's lacrosse team will try to remain undefeated at home when it hosts the University of Vermont in its last game of the season at 2 p.m. tomorrow.

For both the Wildcats and the Catamounts, a victory in their last outings have been elusive rewards as Vermont recently was over-powered by St. Lawrence 21-7. Dartmouth handed the Wildcats their fourth consecutive loss, 17-6, in Hanover on Tuesday.

As expected, the Big Green was

UMass doubleheader to be played Wednesday

The Wildcats' season comes to a close Wednesday with a doubleheader against UMass.

The games were to have been played last Saturday, but wet grounds at Brackett Field forced the postponement.

The Minutemen fell to 16-13 on the season Wednesday when Connecticut, currently the New England Division I leader, beat them 6-1.

Next Wednesday's games, combined with tomorrow's doubleheader at Vermont, give the Cats a final opportunity to mount a charge toward the New England playoffs. The last time UNH made the playoffs was in 1974, when the Cats finished second in New England.

Gametime Wednesday is 1 p.m. at Brackett Field.

the new hampshire sports

Title IX: UNH accepts a confusing issue

Assistant men's athletic director Junie Carboneau is a confused man. Not over the schedules he must grope over, or the budget he must balance.

Instead, like many men across America, he is confused and concerned over Title IX, the federal law passed by Congress in 1972 that bans sex discrimination in intercollegiate athletic programs.

"Personally, I haven't figured out where they (UNH woman's athletics) want to go with their programs," he said. He went on to explain that with the men's program, the majority of money is sunk into the revenue-producing sports (hockey, football and basketball) because they support the rest of the "minor sports."

To set the record straight before anyone bends it, Carboneau and athletic director Andy Mooradian are in favor of Title IX and have in fact seen it grow and prosper around them here at UNH.

What they disagree with is the method of financing the women's program. Their viewpoint it seems is shared by nearly every male concerned with sports.

At UNH, said Carboneau, football brings in about $250,000 per year on the average. That, in no way, comes close to what it costs to run the program. "Scholarships alone costs somewhere around $300,000," he said.

But that isn't the complete story. "They (university) project a figure each year of what they expect us (football) to make each year. They're counting on us for that money."

According to Carboneau hockey nearly pays for itself while basketball doesn't come close. "The women," he said, "don't turn back a nickel."

This is where the problem lies. Women want the same amount of money the men's program gets — that's how it is written in Title IX — fair and equitable.

The men don't want to give it quite that easily. Father Edmund Joyce, the executive vice-president of Notre Dame, presented the problem and his solution in the April 29 issue of The Boston Globe.

"Let's say we spent a million dollars for football," he said, "and of that million we cover $900,000 of the expenses. That means the university must subsidize us $100,000. Why can't the university then subsidize women's sports to that amount (as opposed to one million dollars)?"

A valid point. Should Title IX be attended to by the letter, there just wouldn't be enough money to go around even with federal assistance. For large schools like Notre Dame or UCLA or USC, Title IX poses an enormous headache.

The case here at UNH isn't as severe, fortunately.

According to women's athletic director Gail Bigglestone there has been "no opposition, but instead a lot of support for the growth of women's athletics (at UNH)."

Compared to many schools in New England and the eastern United States, UNH is far ahead in compliance. "A lot of schools," said Carboneau, "have done nothing. But UNH has made continuous strides in the last three years."

True. The women's department has emerged from a division of the physical education department to its own department. Of the 12 women's sports at UNH only one, softball, had a losing record (7-9). Impressive.

And let's face it, UNH has to be very fortunate to be able to say that. Women's sports just don't and — unfortunately — won't bring in money for years to come. Fan appeal is growing but there is still a long way to go.

Much of UNH's growth is due to the Sports Council headed by Maynard Heckel, associate dean of life sciences and agriculture.

"I think the attitude of the Sports Council," said Bigglestone, "is that we're concerned with Title IX but regardless of what happens nationally we are going to provide the best programs possible for both the men and women and also for the recreation department. I'm pleased with that attitude."

In the end, when all sides are considered, there doesn't appear to be any major problem here at UNH.

The men will come to accept women's athletics as just as important and legitimate to the college scene as their own. Many athletes have already.

The women must remain patient. Their road to equality is being smoothed out though pot holes do remain. There will be growing pains. It's hard to imagine they will receive in ten years what has taken some institutions 40 years to achieve for the men.

But both of them must realize that for this whole mess to end, they must work together. Perhaps a men's program can support both the men and the women. Perhaps not. Only time will tell.

Yet, the best thing that UNH can do — and perhaps other schools nation-wide should take notice — is to continue what they have been doing. Though Title IX was a catalyst, women's athletics here have grown despite the politicking and arguing going on in Washington.

Words cannot solve inequality. Action does. And even though the situation at UNH isn't ideal by any means, it is much closer than most programs.

Let's be thankful for that.
